State of the World 2003

Celebrating 20 years of publication, 1983-2003

Focusing on the need to encourage and accelerate positive change, State of the World 2003 has a new look that reflects the Worldwatch's transition to a second generation... a new 12-month timeline for a quick review of the year's most important environmental events... and a broader view of the critical issues that we know you care about most:

- On matters of health – facts and figures on the growing global threat of malaria.
- On ecosystem degradation – the rapid decline of global bird populations and what it foretells
- On the use of natural resources – the importance of minimizing the destructive while meeting the increasing global demand for energy with sustainable new technologies.
- On the continuing divide between rich and poor – the impact of persistent poverty in the urbanized world.
- And recognizing the power of faith to inspire great things, State of the World 2003 also looks at the good work to be achieved when the religious and environmental communities work in concert toward building a sustainable world.

There's more to your State of the World Library subscription, though, than just our flagship annual...

Vital Signs 2003

Now included as part of your Library subscription at no extra charge

Our annual report on key social, environmental, and economic trends provides comprehensive, user-friendly information analysis, tables, and graphs. Together, State of the World and Vital Signs comprise an incomparable reference to what's new and meaningful with the critical global issues that we face today.

Of course, your State of the World Library wouldn't be complete without a year's worth of Worldwatch Papers! Redesigned and repurposed for maximum usability, each Worldwatch Paper offers an in-depth look at the complex interactions between the global economy, the Earth's ecosystem and the political systems that manage these interactions. Scheduled for 2003:

- the accelerating demise of bird populations
- the benefits when corporations buy go and "green"
- how local and national governments can empower their poorest communities to take charge of their own destinies
- And a report from Sandra Postel, Worldwatch Fellow and renowned expert on global fresh water issues

Together, State of the World 2003, Vital Signs 2003, and the Worldwatch Papers comprise some of the most influential news, commentary and analysis about the effort to create a healthy world and global community.
